Dearest Anne Whitney:

The enclosed came this morning from our Mayor, so I post it along. The portrait isn't a bit like her; she is very fair. Yesterday I met my young cousin at Plymouth, and engineered ^{with} a miss her down here - quite a feat for me! We had most beautiful weather; but today it blows and pours. I have sent to Prof. Palmer some guesswork papers on a hitherto unannotated poem of Vaughan's, and have asked him to pass them over to you. They were written just before the smash-up, but are out only ⁱⁿ this month's Academics.

English reviews pay next to nothing; but what Given and I are aiming at is to create interest, so that we may get our 500 copies subscribed for before the spring of 1912. I am going to see Frowde about it (Frowde is the Oxford University publisher, such a nice man), then we go to London next week. I have to go to London via Oxford, anyhow, as Dr. Pritchard demands another look at me. In O. the address will be, at least for the summer, 20 Pembroke Street,

St. Albans, Q. I hope I haven't told you this before? You do not tell me when I am to see you and Mrs. Dargan? Do let it be soon. Meanwhile, without any news worth while, I am over and over your devoted and re-satisfied

2^d May.
